MARIA GABRIELLA TROVATO

BEIRUT, LEBANON
Professor - Landscape Design and Ecosystem Management
Department American University of Beirut

Ah ... my Grandmother's loveliest garden... I look back upon these cherished memories and how they intertwine with my current state of mind:

Think small while looking at the big horizon.

Be yourself, be independent, express your opinion... the rest is history!

My landscape architecture career had its jump-start with the international design workshop "e-scape transitional settlements". As per its epitome... I'm still eagerly waiting for it!

I get easily inspired and engaged. I like that about myself! Dall'Italia, I bring to my work the sense of beauty and the faith in friendship.

I'd like to see my designs go down in history as able to upgrade the quality of life of the most deprived communities and admire my peers' ability to read the complexity of a place.

If I were to morph into an object, I'd like to turn into a mirror and reflect to others their own images.

In my dreams, I'd have gelato with Albert Einstein. We'd roam the streets of Paris I absolutely love or those of San Francisco I dream of visiting one day!

Classical Music to Write, Jazz to Design

↓ Syrian informal settlements, Bekaa Valley, Beirut, Lebanon, 2015.